Shipyard Worker Is Killed in Auto Crash

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 4.—Wilbur S. Rusk, twenty-two-year-old Broomall shipyard worker, died when his automobile skidded and overturned on Ferry road, near Doylestown, Saturday evening.

Rusk was crushed in the wreckage of his convertible coupe, although his mother, Mrs. Ethel Rusk, also of Broomall, seated beside him, escaped with a few scratches.

Pennsylvania Motor Police say Rusk failed to negotiate a curve on Ferry road, and the car skidded and landed on its top.

Warren Haycock, a farmer, living nearby, took Rusk to Doylestown Emergency Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

The victim was a shipfitter employed in a yard at Chester.

LATEST NEWS

Received from International News Service Over Special Teletype News Wire.

Germany To Back Finland To Utmost

Berlin, Nov. 4.—Germany will back Finland to the utmost in rejecting Secretary of State Hull's bid for cessation of hostilities between Finland and Russia, the Wilhelmstrasse said today.

German officials expressed indignation over Washington's alleged "interference" and praised the Finnish government for its "courage in announcing" that Hull's description of a Soviet peace offer "was not correct in all particulars."

(Editor's note: Finland has not yet replied to Hull's message but a DNB dispatch from Helsinki quoted the official Finnish news agency as denying accuracy of Washington dispatches concerning the Soviet offer.)

The Wilhelmstrasse summed up American policies as "ghetto gangsterism."

Reveal Torpedoing of U. S. S. Salinas

Washington, Nov. 4.—The Navy today announced that the U. S. S. Salinas, a 16,000-ton oil tanker, had been torpedoed while on convoy duty southwest of Iceland the night of Oct. 29-30 but had reached an undisclosed port with no loss of life or serious injury to its crew of 107 officers and men.

Announcement of the attack was withheld by naval officials until the vessel reached port. No details of the damage will be released "as it will be of no value except to the Nazis," the Navy said.

The official statement pointed out the ship was in a convoy and attacked about a day prior to the torpedoing and sinking of the destroyer U. S. S. James.

The Salinas was the fourth Navy ship to be attacked while on convoy or patrol duty in the North Atlantic. Commander Harley F. Cope of New Orleans is the captain of the Salinas.

Accuse French of Running Contraband

London, Nov. 4.—The British Admiralty accused France of trying to run contraband for the Germans today and announced French merchant vessels conveyed by a French sloop tried unsuccessfully to scuttle themselves when intercepted by British warships off South Africa.

The Admiralty charged that the Vichy Government "recently has been attempting to run contraband for the Germans from the East to France in escorted convoys."

DESIRE BICYCLE

The Red Cross has issued a plea for a bicycle for a small man to use in going to and from his employment out-of-town. Anyone having such to donate asked to telephone Miss Francis Landreth, Bristol 2143.

Offer $75,000 for Farm Developed by Boltz

Bidding $75,000, a Connecticut broker yesterday "conditionally" purchased the "dream farm" on which Robert J. Boltz, alleged Philadelphia embezzler, spent $263,000 of his clients' money.

The "condition" is a second bid, offered, it is understood, by George B. Lorimer, youngest son of the late George Horace Lorimer. Presented by Thomas W. Montague, Philadelphia real estate broker, it offers $71,500 for the farm and a small house in the town of Solesbury, Bucks County.

Montague asked time to reach his client, now cruising on his yacht, in the belief he would authorize a new bid. If there is no word before Monday, the $75,000 bid would be accepted. That was offered by Alvin G. McKinstry, Bucks county real estate man, acting for Mr. and Mrs. Stewart B. Hopps, Ridgefield, Conn., and New York City.

Both agents appeared at a creditors' meeting in the office of David W. Bachman, referee in bankruptcy, who set the Monday deadline after discussion with the swindled Boltz clients.

McKinstry brought a $5,000 check as a deposit which he turned over to Alexander J. Conn, trustee of the bankrupt Boltz estate. Conn then revealed the Montague bid, which entails a 5 per cent commission.

ISSUE WARNING ABOUT FALSE ALARMS OF FIRE

Tullytown Fire Company Says Practice Must Stop; Warn Boys and Parents

2 AND 3 TIMES WEEKLY

TULLYTOWN, Nov. 4.—Drastic action is to be taken by Tullytown Fire Company if any of the individuals sounding false fire alarms in the borough are caught, it is stated by members of the company.

A warning is issued to boys who are said to have been carrying out this practice two or three times weekly, and the warning is also given to the parents of the lads.

The false alarms have been sent in, it is stated, by boys who push the alarm buttons at various points in the town.

Both the firemen and residents of the town have been "up in arms" over the practice, carried out at different times of the day, and the firemen state it must stop at once.

Preparations Under Way To Stage "What A Life"

Preparations for the staging of "What A Life," a typical Henry Aldrich play, are now under way at Bristol High School.

With Miss Margaret Collier and John Burris supervising, plans are going forward nicely.

The play is centered around Central High School which Henry attends. He gets into the usual scraps and difficulties attributed to Henry Aldrich.

The play will be staged two nights, November 20 and 21.

Student activity tickets will be accepted and other tickets are now on sale.

The cast of characters includes: Henry, Albert Dowden; Barbara, Henry's heart-throb, Winifred Kelly; Mrs. Aldrich, Margaret Brownlee; Mr. Bradley, the school principal, George Mollen; Miss Shea, Mr. Bradley's secretary, Helen Petty; Mr. Nelson, assistant principal, Robert Monti; George Bigelow, the school's Casanova, Walt Wilson; and the usual group of teachers: Miss Eggleston, English teacher, Evelyn Embess; Mr. Patterson, history teacher, Alfred Rogers; Miss Pike, biology teacher, Betty Brown; Miss Wheeler, music teacher, Helen Ostro; and Miss Johnson, physical education teacher, Ruth Watson.

Smoyers Entertain At Evening Masked Party

A masquerade party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smoyer, Swain street, Saturday evening. A special film from an aviation field in Hawaii, also other "movies," were shown. Refreshments were served.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robinson, Tullytown; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Warrick, Tacony; Miss Louise Adams, Burlington, N. J.; Edward Myatt, Florence, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ballinger, Miss Helen Appleton, Frank Jenks.

MOTHERS MEET NOV. 5

The Mothers' Association members will meet in Bristol high school auditorium tomorrow evening, instead of November 12th.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

The annual home-coming program for the Sellersville-Perkasie Alumni Association, is planned for November 22nd.

The committee, of which Miss Margaret Smith is chairman, has been working on arrangements for the day's activities. The program will begin with the football game in the afternoon on the consolidated high school field, Sellersville-Perkasie will meet Ambler in a stiffly contested battle at two o'clock. The committee for the afternoon program, in charge of Miss Grace Gray, is anxious to give the alumni as great an opportunity as possible to visit and renew acquaintances. To do this the committee is planning to reserve a section of the high school building to renew acquaintances before and after the game.

Further opportunity for getting together and visiting old friends will be provided for at a banquet.

Fraternity Temple will be reserved for alumni activities in the evening, following the banquet. There will be dancing, cards and an opportunity to visit with teachers and graduates.

The automobile of Ernst Heitzmann, South Langhorne, was recovered in Trenton after it had been taken from his store property.

The car, found in the Glen Afton section of Trenton, had smashed against a wall and considerable damage had been done. No trace of the thief could be found.

The car had been stolen during a rush period while several of the clerks in the store were out to dinner.

At a recent meeting at Bowman's Hill, held in the Andrassy House, the second session of the police school was held by Dr. R. C. Magill.

The group effected an organization at this meeting and the following officers were elected: President, Dr. R. C. Magill, New Hope; vice-president, William P. Reading; secretary, W. M. Ueberroth; treasurer, Arthur J. Moser.

Wednesday evenings were found to be the most convenient for all members and all future meetings will be held every other Wednesday during the Fall and Winter months.

A demonstration in jiu jitsu was given by Sgt. Looker, instructor in New Jersey State Police Training School at Wilburth.

E. F. Brouse, District Forester of the Department of Forests and Waters, was present, and had as his guest, H. B. Rowland, of Harrisburg, who is in charge of the State Fire Wardens who fight the fires in the Commonwealth. Russell F. Paetzell, Superintendent of the Delaware Division Canal, attended the meeting.

All of these men were deeply interested and after the demonstration by Sergeant Looker, they practiced the

Time To Insist

Washington, Nov. 1. THOSE who are supporting Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy have a right to demand that he straighten out the domestic situation. Not only have they the right to insist upon this but failure to do so is to connive in a state of affairs which saps our strength, blocks our purposes and enhances the peril to our allies and to ourselves.

ACQUIESCENCE IN THE SOGGY STATE

of the defense organization promotes a dangerous deception of the people. It does more than that; it is of actual aid to Hitler. For, beyond dispute, it is impossible effectively to operate our foreign policy if our domestic affairs are in a mess. The force with which we deal with mat-

TERS ABROAD DEPENDS UPON THE COMPETENCE WITH WHICH WE MANAGE OUR ESTABLISHMENT AT HOME.

We cannot be strong in the foreign field if we are weak in the domestic field. No one should have to argue that impotence at home means impotence abroad.

NEITHER long-distance Presidential pugnacity over the radio nor the roseate publicity of Administration "information services" detracts from the solidity of these facts. The question arises as to whether the stage has not been reached when determined action should be taken to compel the President to put an end to the things that paralyze not only our attempt to aid Britain and Russia but to defend ourselves. Every effort to persuade him to accept advice along these lines or to correct the obvious mistakes has failed. Perhaps the effort to compel will fail too, but at least it should be made.

LIGHT VOTE POLLED DURING EARLY HOURS

A Total of 257 Votes Were Polled In Bristol Up Until 10 A. M.

213 VOTED IN TOWNSHIP

Political workers were active early today in an endeavor to get out as large a percentage of the registered vote as possible in what is generally considered an "off year" election.

The interest appeared to be lacking among the voters during the early morning hours, except in districts where there were contests.

In the ten election districts in Bristol Borough a total vote of 257 had been polled up until ten o'clock, this morning. The second ward led all of the other districts with a total of 44 votes. Then the first precinct of the fifth ward was second with 41. The smallest vote was being polled in the fourth ward where only 13 persons had gone to the polls in the two districts.

RED CROSS WORKERS HERE PREPARED FOR ANNUAL ROLL CALL

Preliminary Meeting is Held at Headquarters; Miss Robins Speaks

NEED IS STRESSED

Ask Huge Increase in Those Enrolling As Members For 1942

The preliminary meeting of workers of the Red Cross roll call was held yesterday at Red Cross headquarters, 120 Mill street.

Miss Margaret Robins, vice-chairman of the Southeastern District of Red Cross, addressed the meeting, stating that the National Red Cross is one of 63 Red Cross societies which go to form the International Red Cross. These together alleviate the suffering of humanity, meet the human needs arising in the homes of the men in armed service, and to assist families and individuals to the extent that their needs are disaster-caused and cannot be met by the families themselves.

"At the present time the Red Cross is doing every task which it is called upon to do in actual war time. Red Cross is the only organization allowed by the Government in the camps, for because of its congressional charter, it has been made responsible for mitigating the troubles which arise either in the life of our soldiers and sailors personally or the effect upon their homes due to their presence in camp."

The speaker continued: "The Red Cross makes possible the human touch between army and navy and home. This frequently necessitates telegrams, long distance telephone calls, and medical treatment, all of which is paid for by the Red Cross. During the first world war the Red Cross found itself obliged to succor not alone the soldiers on the battlefield, but refugees, war widows and orphans, and invalided soldiers. This has become a continuing duty. In the years since the great war the Home Service Department has been most helpful in service to veterans, co-operating closely with government agencies and other social agencies, and has given much assistance in preparation of claims, etc."

"Civil Defense and Red Cross do not conflict, Red Cross remembering her obligations and helping in every way," Miss Robins warned that "we must not be too complacent about the safety of our community, but that we should plan well for any disaster that might come upon us." She said it is hard to make young people visualize what can happen here, serious diseases as meningitis, spotted and typhus fever and bubonic plague. "Today the need is greater than ever before. The Red Cross offers instruction in many classes of First Aid, Nurses Aid and Home Nursing. Because of increased activities and increased service to our boys Red Cross, of which you are a member, needs 2½ times the number of members of last year. The Red Cross membership roll is the opportunity for every citizen to answer present in the cause of humanity."

Miss Robins served two years in Paris and Serbia, and was decorated by the King of Serbia for her service in that country.

COUNTER-PROPAGANDA

An effort by Washington to crack the axis news monopoly in Europe is under way. Last July Col. William J. Donovan was made Co-ordinator of Information by executive order of President Roosevelt. At that time the Colonel's job was described as one of collection. He was to gather and analyze information and data relative to national defense and pass that information along to government agencies.

Since then the Colonel's duties have been broadened. He now heads an official world-wide information service for the purpose of sending counter-propaganda into occupied countries and Germany. Working with him is Nelson Rockefeller, who directs all information activities in Latin America.

Ten transmitters in this country are now sending news by short wave to Europe. Although Great Britain has offered its outlets to the United States, Colonel Donovan and his aides believe that such assistance might make the broadcasts less convincing to conquered peoples as well as to the Germans. American engineers are toying with the idea of establishing a transmitter in Iceland.

SOURCE OF THE SINKER

How did the doughnut originate? Henry Ellis of Cape Cod says an Indian's poor aim did the trick, when his arrow missed a pilgrim cook and pierced the flat cake she was baking. Another theory is that one Capt. Hanson Crockett Gregory of Maine conceived the delicacy. To settle the universal issue, the National Dining Association will sponsor a debate between Mr. Ellis and a descendant of Captain Gregory.

The first fact to determine is which came first, the doughnut or the hole. Was the hole punched in the doughnut, or was the hole already there and the doughnut simply built around it? Was the hole designed as a handle for the doughnut, or was the doughnut constructed to preserve the entity of emptiness? And was the first doughnut baked to make dunking easier, or did this pastime achieve its popular eminence simply in the evolution of human adaptation?

The world is shaking with these queries, which have baffled kings and perplexed multitudes.

This is known, though: "As you ramble through life, brother, whatever be your goal, keep your eye upon the doughnut, and not upon the hole."

In spite of all the planning, no shortage in blueprints has been reported.

Emerald Embassy by FRANCIS GERARD

SYNOPSIS

While strolling along the countryside, Ambrose Pennyfeather, a respected citizen of Weyland, England, is murdered by a man who spoke with a French accent. In the nearby residence of Lord George Lanchester, he and his brother, Yves Blaydes-Steele, discuss the murder of their friend, who "never had an enemy in the world." Then talk turns to the mission Yves is to perform for his brother the next day. In the year 1835, the then Earl of Lanchester deposed the tyrannical Dwan of the Island of Sulungu, and seated the latter's cousin, Prince Thalun, on the throne. For this, Queen Victoria honored Lanchester with the mission of presenting a precious emerald to the new sultan each year. The Dwan conferred upon Lord Lanchester the "Honour of the Emerald," and from that time on, the Blaydes-Steele family became a link between the Imperial House of England and the ruling monarch of Sulungu. There were now 101 jewels in the necklace. In recent years, the Dwan had come to England to have the new emerald added to the chain. This Yves was to do the next day. There was a prophecy that "he who wore the necklace wore also the diadem." The priceless string now assumed international importance since Sulungu loomed as a strategically located submarine base and Japan was nearby. Besides, oil had been discovered there. The little island, therefore, was of inestimable value to Great Britain.

"Chaps like me is all very well for dealing with small burglaries and thefts of bicycles and such like, but it stands to reason we haven't had the experience that these fellows up at the Yard get. I always say if you want an expert's job done, why call in an expert."

"I always thought you were extremely sensible," nodded Yves. "Have you had any breakfast? No? Then come in and have some grub with me."

After breakfast the inspector asked, "When might it be convenient for me to see His Lordship?"

"I'll find out for you," said Yves. "But I've a suggestion to make if you wouldn't mind."

"After that there breakfast, Mr. Yves," said Rainbird expansively. "I wouldn't mind anything."

"Well, this is how I see it," said Blaydes-Steele. "You would like to bring in the Yard, Colonel Stafford by the way, suppose you carry a gun?"

"I've got an automatic."

"Well, bring it. George is most insistent about that. Says one can't escort a million's worth of emeralds without adequate protection. See you at nine-thirty, old man. Bye-bye."

At five minutes to nine Mr. Blaydes-Steele's car was brought from the garage. At nine precisely he appeared beneath the front porch, looking extremely distinguished in his perfectly cut morning coat. As Yves switched on the engine and gently pressed the accelerator pedal, the big, yellow car woke to roaring, snarling life. One moment it was stationary before the front door and the next it was out of sight down the drive.

"I hope he'll drive more carefully coming back," said Lady Lanchester.

CHAPTER FOUR

Yves was spending the night at Weyland Hall and after a final nightcap he retired to bed. But not to sleep.

The aged figure of Ambrose Pennyfeather quite literally haunted him. Stafford had telephoned late that evening to say that there was no clue whatsoever to the murderer and, so far, not a ghost of a motive had appeared.

Stafford had said that Rainbird had been hopeful of establishing some link by means of the dog Aristotle's jaws. His fangs had been carefully examined but there was not a trace of thread or cloth found.

Yves spent a wretched night. He awoke at six with a headache. But after a hot bath, he felt better and by seven o'clock he was letting himself out of the billiard room door into the garden.

The morning was misty and gave hint of a brilliant day to come. He glanced at his wrist watch and saw that he had two hours before he need leave in the car. On the spur of the moment, he passed through the gate in the lofty garden wall and found himself in the narrow lane which led to Weyland's Wood.

Five minutes' walk brought him to the spot where Mr. Pennyfeather had met his death. Yves was moving slowly over the ground, his eyes intent, when a hoarse voice from the mist exclaimed suddenly, "Now then, now then, and what might you be a-doin' of?"

Yves looked up and recognised Simon Whistlercraft, Weyland constable.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Yves," he pronounced it "Wives"—"Turbid business, this 'ere, yiss, yiss."

"Mornin', Whistlercraft," nodded Yves pleasantly. "Yes, it's all that. You been here long?"

"Every hour of the night, Mr. Yves."

Yves had a short conversation with the policeman who confirmed the evident fact that the stony ground near the first trees of Weyland's Wood would retain no foot-print.

On his return to the house, Yves found the local inspector of police seated in the hall.

"Hello, Rainbird, any further developments?"

"No, Mr. Yves."

"What's the Colonel Stafford going to do now?" asked young Blaydes-Steele.

"Well, that's what I come to see His Lordship about. The Colonel's against callin' in the Yard and I'm here behind his back, so to speak."

"You want my brother to persuade your chief to appeal to Scotland Yard, is that it?"

"Well, sir, it's like this," went on the inspector with good, hard sense.

"You mean Sir John Meredith as was Superintendent of the C.I.D.?"

is against it. I have no doubt my brother could persuade your superior to fall in with your wishes but it wouldn't make for the best relations between you, would it?"

Rainbird nodded. "Not the very best, sir."

"Exactly," said Yves. "Now I've another idea. Have you ever heard of Meredith?"

"You mean Sir John Meredith as was Superintendent of the C.I.D. Why 'e's a 'ole Yard in 'imself!"

"That's the fellow," nodded Yves. "I'm seeing him today. Perhaps I might persuade him to take an unofficial interest in the case."

"You couldn't have anybody better," agreed the inspector. "I've always wanted to see Sir John Meredith at work. Be an education, it would. And now I'll be getting along, Mr. Yves. Thank you for the breakfast. Oh, and another thing, perhaps you wouldn't mind not mentioning my visit to the Colonel if you happen to see him."

"I'll be as close as an oyster," promised his host.

When the inspector had gone Angela appeared in the doorway of the dining-room.

"Mornin', Yves, John's on the phone and wants to know what he's to wear."

"Oh lord!" said Yves. "I forgot to tell him." He went into the hall and picked up the telephone receiver. "John? Yves here."

"In what," Meredith's voice came over the wire, "do I drape my manly form for this occasion? Do we give his oriental nibs the whole works?"

"The whole works!" stressed Yves.

"Blimey!" snorted Sir John. "If I'd known that, I'd never have agreed to go with you. Well, what time do we meet?"

"Nine-thirty," replied Yves. "Oh

Why The Voters Of Bristol Should Vote The Straight Republican Ticket

AT THE ELECTION TO BE HELD TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 4TH

- 1 A citizen should be a voter.
- 2 In 1941, each citizen in Bristol has the chance to cast his ballot for the candidates he believes can and will do the job. The job is to manage the affairs of the Borough to the best interests of all the citizens.
- 3 The business of the Borough is successful. This year, and every year, the REPUBLICAN candidates for office can stand on the record of the REPUBLICAN administration. It proves they can do the job.
- 4 Bristol is meeting its problems of growth. And due to wise and efficient REPUBLICAN management of Borough affairs, it will continue to meet them, as far as can be foreseen.
- 5 Year after year the Burgess can report that the Borough has met its financial obligations. All bills are paid promptly on a pay-as-you-go basis.
- 6 The Borough of Bristol has had no bond issue since 1932.
- 7 The REPUBLICAN administration of the Borough is an efficient government. But it is also something that is even more important—in these times of climbing taxes and top-heavy public debts. It is an economical government. It saves the people's money.
- 8 In Bristol the taxes have been reduced four times in eight years. An 11-mill tax rate now covers all Borough expenses.
- 9 Economy in Borough expenditures has not been allowed to affect the public services provided to the people. The schools, the water system, the protective agencies—all of these are keeping ahead of the needs of the public.
- 10 All of the Borough public services maintain the highest standards of performance. Yet the Administration keeps the cost to the people at a minimum.
- 11 This year the voters have an unusual chance to express themselves on the kind of local government they want. This election is primarily a local election—and therefore is a very important one to the people in Bristol. It is an opportunity to support the local government that has done the things listed here.
- 12 World events and national policies do not enter into this election. There is no office listed on the ballot which has any effect on such sweeping subjects. But the whole ballot is concerned with the equally important topic of local government—the management of affairs right here where you live.
- 13 The REPUBLICAN ticket for the Borough of Bristol consists of eighteen candidates. Voting for these men means voting for the kind of government described here—the kind of government Bristol has. These men are campaigning on performance—the best platform any candidate can offer.
- 14 The voters have the chance to support the efficient and economical government they now have. Here are the men who will continue that kind of government:

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Gailey)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O God, our Father, as we attempt in our weakness to lift our eyes to the celestial sources of righteousness, may Thy merciful providences protect our vision from the influence of the flesh, the allurements of the world, and the illusions of the wicked one. May we be ushered into Thy presence, thereby receiving strength for the day and courage to face the trials and temptations of life. In the name of Christ, Amen.

C. L. Kline, Pond street, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Percy, Collingswood, N. J.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

A talent-filled cast, discerning direction, and a gay, sophisticated screen play studded with some of the most delightful singing and dancing seen on the screen in some time, combine to make "Lady Be Good," which opened Sunday at the Grand Theatre, a musical treat which patrons will want to see not once but twice.

M-G-M has gone "all out" in its array of talent for this picture which stars Eleanor Powell, Ann Southern and Robert Young, with Lionel Barrymore, John Carroll, Red Skelton and Virginia O'Brien adding topnotch talent in featured supporting roles.

BRISTOL THEATRE

The belly-laugh, which occurs to moviegoers all too infrequently, had a renaissance locally last night at the Bristol Theatre, where "Nothing But The Truth" opened with Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard in the roles of chief risibility-routers.

The laughs which greeted the merry new film tenant of the Bristol Theatre were more than deserved. There isn't the slightest doubt that "Nothing But The Truth" will be a strong candidate for the ten-best list of pictures for this year. It's brilliant, fast-paced, rollicking farce.

RITZ THEATRE

BEAUTY PARADE

By Max Factor, Jr.

(Famous Make-Up Specialist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD —(INS)— That old saying, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," is highly pertinent to the perfection of a great many details of feminine appearance.

It is much better to guard against and ward off double or triple chins than it is to try and get rid of them after they have appeared.

It is easier to prevent wrinkles than it is to remove them.

It is much more simple to guard against acne than it is to overcome it. It is a lot less difficult not to bleach or dye your hair than it is to repair the mistakes which are so easily and frequently made in either of these procedures.

Chapped hands or faces can be prevented more quickly and more simply than they can be cured.

It's much less complicated not to pluck your eyebrows than it is to bring them back to beauty after they have been plucked to a ridiculous thinness.

And so it goes in many other departments, of personal appearance. Almost literally, that "ounce of prevention" is worth considerably more than "pounds of cure."

Don't, however, make the second mistake of being a defeatist in your attitude toward personal beauty and glamor of appearance, even if you have committed the first error of failing to take steps to prevent the development of ugly flaws. It is never entirely too late to take corrective steps, but you must realize that the sooner they are taken, the better.

In nearly every case, diet and exercise, or both, will overcome double of freckles, Jimmy is one of Hollywood's most promising juveniles. He is appearing at the Ritz Theatre with Freddie Bartholomew and Billy Cook in "Naval Academy."

Definitely established wrinkles can't often be removed unless they are the quick result of sickness or general loss of weight. Gaining back health and weight will generally overcome this problem. So, once again, the advice must be: See your doctor.

Faint etchings of squint wrinkles, if they haven't been established too long, can usually be made to disappear by protecting the eyes from sun and wind with protective glasses.

Acne affords another glamor flaw which requires the services of a physician or a specialist in dermatology. Those who have bleached their hair, and are sorry they did it, should either start growing their tresses back to their natural shade, or turn to a professional hair operator whose skill is beyond doubt for restoration or repair.

Hands which have become chapped to an average degree can generally be cured by the same care which would have prevented chapping. Hand lotion will work wonders for either purpose.

By Jack Gill

Outside of the fact that a slight mist prevailed, nothing of a rational nature occurred to electrify the average district grid fan. No stands seating a couple of thousand spectators collapsed and no beefy lineman took a slug at Mrs. Jones' little "scat" back Tommy.

Bristol and Morrisville kept nearing that climax. Already Thanksgiving Day is being marked upon the calendar as a choice date on the football schedule. Roaring down the stretch like Abbott and Costello at the height of a musical hit, these two teams appear as though they will meet headlong in a thriller. But first Bristol must get past Saturday's headache. Burlington may put an abrupt halt to a streak that grasps longingly at its sixth straight verdict. For Bristol, the Blue Devil clash is the highlight of the home season.

Morrisville's comfortable but bothersome squeeze triumph over Bensalem was taken with a grain of salt. Bensalem evidently has improved, weather conditions hampered the light attacking team, which, in this case was Morrisville, and several key performers were missing from the Bulldogs' starting line-up. Newtown's none to impressive 6-6 tie with Pemberton, a team rated on about even terms with Langhorne, gave Mike Delist a moment's rest.

A review of Bristol does not seem complete without a mention of the spirit of the squad. All during the Bunnies' ball games this season there has been a steady flow of chatter by the line and the back-ups. These kids are cocky, have caught the winning complex and evidently will not give up. This factor may go a long way in determining the victor in the approaching Burlington and Morrisville conflicts.

Each week in this review we try to denote a flaw or a bright spot in the play that either won or lost ball games for district elevens. Due almost solely to the "semi-liquid" conditions, (pun intended) teams made the most of fumbles. Bristol could trace two of its touchdowns against Conshohocken to recovered miscues. So likewise could John Hoffman's Morrisville covey. In fact, Morrisville won the game, 18-6, by two fumble recoveries. Bud McAllister, Bulldogs' line backer-up, proved to be the wide awake boy.

Fumbling is faulty ball handling. And ball handling is a vital part of any fast moving offensive thrust. If you should ever interrogate a coach on the subject, he will describe it in one sneering word—"calamity."

For that is just what such a fumble amounts to. A team can drive 60 yards to the five yard line, lose the ball by fumbling and watch the opposition in one play kick the ball back to mid-field. It's downright disheartening and a morale shattering incident comparable to an error in the ninth inning with a winning run on third base.

One fumble can cost a unit more ground than its best backs gain during the entire contest. The tendency is to do something with the ball before it hits the hand. Hurriedly trying to work a reverse or some other difficult play that requires speed, high school backs sometimes handle the pigskin like a hot potato. The fundamental taught here by coaches is for the back to eye the ball until it hits the hands. Then and only then begin to act or move.

The feel of the ball is the important thing. Some great players have carried footballs with them during the summer vacation months just to become more acquainted with the spheroid. Great passers like O'Brien were practically born and brought up totting a football.

Coach Daugherty, while he was at Bristol, used to make backs who fumbled at half on Saturday afternoon carry a football from class to class on Monday morning. Wherever the player went that ball went with him. And each passerby had a taunting remark to make as he slid past the offender. It made the boy fumble conscious and he guarded against it his next time out.

It's the little fundamental things that appear to be mere minor matters that differentiate between the winner and loser. A fumble is one of those "B" grade" things.

The St. Ann's A. A. team, which was idle last Sunday because of a cancellation in its schedule, will hold a practice session tonight at 7:30 o'clock. The "Saints" will meet the Doylestown Moose this Sunday at Community field, Doylestown.

Red Cross Workers Here Prepared for Annual Roll Call

Mrs. E. Linton Martin gave a report of the production department for the year: 3149 sewed and 397 knitted garments, making a total of 3546, an increase of 300 per cent over last year.

Eight thousand, six hundred and thirty-five surgical dressings were made, and money for 11 kits given.

Two hundred and fifteen women sewed and 73 knitted. The Edgely Group, outstanding in its steady sewing for one year produced 800 garments. One worker, Mrs. Elwood Welsh, Otter street, sewed 611 garments during the year. Mrs. Martin stated that 2250 sleeveless sweaters for the Army, and 150 for the Navy, were imperative, and those who knit were asked to go to 120 Mill street for wool as soon as possible, as November 25th is the date they are to be returned.

Miss Frances Landreth, of Home Service Department, stated that the number of hours given by Mrs. deGanahl, Mrs. Webb, Mrs. Wetherill and Mrs. Eastburn is 2574, used in transporting the sick to and from the Abington and Jeanes Hospital. Miss Landreth had given 195 hours in meeting the needs of persons. Miss Landreth stated that 192 families had been helped through the year with food, clothing and surgical appliances, 50 more families by advice, while at the present time there were 18 active home service cases of men in the armed forces and civilians.

Mrs. Marie Holland cited the interesting cases where Red Cross is helping those to whom great misfortune has come. Mrs. Frank Lehman, Roll call chairman, discussed plans formulated for Bristol's Roll Call. "This is our community chest, for Red Cross embraces our local relief agency! With increased numbers working there should be more than one person beside said. Extra supplies for workers, longing to Red Cross in every house," can be had by calling at Mrs. Lehman's home. November 11th marks the opening of the canvass, when citizens will be visited for their membership dues for the year 1942.

The Great Game of Politics

Byrd, who has supported every item of the foreign policy to date, declared last week that, "judged by any standard, our national-defense program to date is a failure," and served notice that he did not intend to go "one step further" "until action is taken to stop all defense strikes and reduce the incompetency which permeates our defense program." If this means opposition to revision of the Neutrality Act, it is not consistent with the national interests, because failure now of that effort would be very bad indeed. But if it means an intention to discard the idea that any protest against the appalling incompetency with which domestic affairs are being handled weakens our position in the foreign field—if that is the case, then it not only is in the national interests but in the interests of Britain, Russia and every other country anxious to end the Hitler menace.

IF Mr. Willkie, Senator Austin, Senator Bridges, Representative Wadsworth, Senator George, Senator Glass, Senator Bailey, Mr. Baruch, Lewis W. Douglas, John E. Hanes, Mr. Knudsen and the many other anti-New Deal Democrats and Republicans who have given Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy indispensable support and rendered him invaluable aid—if these men joined Senator Byrd in a demand that the Administration adopt a decent labor policy, a decent farm policy, a decent price policy, a decent financial policy, and then substitute competent men for the known incompetents in the defense management, perhaps this domestic situation would straighten out. There is no way in which they can serve the country better than to try.

NEARLY all of them feel exactly the way Senator Byrd has spoken. But most of them have been proceeding on the theory that to criticize Mr. Roosevelt's defense management might enfeeble us in the fight to crush Hitler. No greater error could be conceived. The exact reverse is true. The way to aid Hitler is to silently acquiesce in the incompetency of the defense management; the way to defeat Hitler is to end the inefficiency and confusion which are its chief characteristics.

NO more deadly indictment of any Administration has been made than that contained in one paragraph of the Byrd statement, commenting on the almost abject pleas made by the President to Mr. Lewis, who still threatens to hold up the whole program. "From January 1," said Mr. Byrd, "until now more than seven million man days have been lost in defense strikes alone. With those lost days more than 1,000 four-engine heavy bombers could have been built and sent to England to bomb Hitler while he is engaged in Russia. Instead only forty have been sent." No answer has been made to that charge. None will be made, because none is possible. Nor is there any answer to the charge that these seven million days have been lost because the President a year ago refused to sanction legislation outlawing strikes on defense contracts.

FOR eighteen months he has permitted these strikes to continue—temporizing, compromising, conceding, conciliating. He now has a defense organization and a Cabinet composed exclusively of yes-men. There is no one near him to stand up to him, to argue with him, to point out a mistake. Mr. Baruch did for awhile, but apparently he has been put in the doghouse for that very reason. Today the President is surrounded by his officeholders, his New Deal intimates and the defense businessmen, who have made it their first consideration to stand well with the New Deal group.

HIS ideas come largely from the same advisers who have been close to him for eight years—some of whom, sad to say, are on the Supreme Court. He still has a grand time at his press conferences, and still deeply enjoys his own wit, as evidenced in the reply to the reporter who asked whether he knew from what side the torpedo that hit the Kearny came. "Why, yes," the President waggishly said, "it came from the outside." At that, it is reported, everybody roared.

WHY IT IS TO YOUR INTEREST TO VOTE THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

There must be a reason why the people of Bucks County have for many years, entrusted the management of the County affairs to the Republican party.

The principal reason is, that the Republican Party has always nominated men and women for the County offices, of the highest integrity and ability, who personally manage and discharge the duties of their respective offices with the assistance of capable deputies and clerks, of whom no more are employed than actually necessary. You will find no "drones" in any of the County buildings where the County business is conducted. No elected Republican official has ever been charged with any scandal or misbehavior in office.

This policy has resulted in an economical and well managed administration of County affairs, whereby the County tax rate has been kept within four mills, one of the lowest tax rates in all of the 67 counties in Pennsylvania.

Compare the tax rate and bonded indebtedness of Bucks County with just a few of the other counties in the State.

| COUNTY         | TAX RATE (MILLS) | BONDED INDEBTEDNESS |
|----------------|------------------|---------------------|
| BUCKS          | 4                | $ 96,000.00        |
| Beaver         | 10               | $4,453,000.00      |
| Bradford       | 18               | $ 384,000.00       |
| Carbon         | 13               | $1,970,000.00      |
| Clearfield     | 24               | $ 735,000.00       |
| Carbon         | 13               | $3,665,000.00      |
| Fayette        | 14               | $8,529,000.00      |
| Northampton    | 9                | $ 694,000.00       |
| Northumberland | 13               |                     |

The above figures are impressive these days when public debts are climbing from day to day. They summarize in cold figures the business-like efficiency that has governed the Republican administration of the affairs of Bucks County for years. Such evidence does not appeal to the emotions of the voters and taxpayers. It is convincing to their business sense and the results are apparent in their pocketbooks. That is the best kind of evidence of good government any political party can offer.

This year the Republican party again presents to the voters of Bucks County, intelligent, capable and industrious candidates for the various county offices whose names appear below.

Vote for them on November 4th next, for continued efficient and economical administration of County affairs.
